WASHINGTONIAN MEMORABILIA

Emma Cleary c.1946 George and Martha Washington dolls. I bought them on Ebay, and love them to bits

Vintage 'Queen Washington' cigar band, beautifully framed. Publication present from a dear friend

"GW". Fan my son Tommy made for me. Martha loved finery and she loved George

Washington puzzle box. On my desk while I wrote the war chapters of my book. Inspiration and diversion

Table decoration souvenirs from my New York publication dinner. All good friends and many of them fellow authors

I loved looking at these dour Puritan images of the Washingtons. They made me determined to breathe life into George and Martha in my book

Patriotic paperweight that I cherish. Given me by a good American friend in London

Martha Washington souvenir plate. A reminder of the many dinner services that she and George commissioned for Mount Vernon

Couldn't resist this Ebay vintage postcard. 'George Led the World's Dance in His Day'. A true Virginian, he could dance three hours without pause

Poor imitation - but my own - of 'States china'. Manufactured in Canton as a present for Martha. Complete with 'MW' initials central

George and Martha salt and pepper souvenirs from Valley Forge. Delightful publication present from friends at the Library of Congress

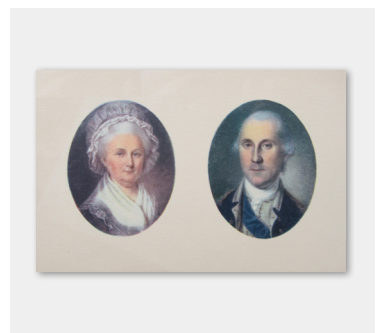

Martha Washington 4-cent and 11/2-cent stamps of different eras. And a 21st century place card

Sumptuous plate showing Sulgrave Manor. Washington's ancestral home near Banbury, UK. Gift of Colonial Dames of New York

Produce of various US National Park Service revolutionary war sites. nps.gov, I love your shops!

George and Martha, in pensive mood. Her caps - and chins - got bigger with age. He became deaf, needed glasses, and - famously - false teeth
